

Cuba furnishes an ideal training ground for troops, so the marines take advantage of climate and terrain. Here's the machine gun company of the Seventh Regiment drilling with Lewis guns at the famous San Juan blockhouse.

Copyright Western Newspaper Union.

German nurses and wounded in gas masks at a dressing station on the Italian front. This picture has had wide circulation in Teuton countries.

Copyright Central News

New York city's new head of the army draft, Martin Conboy, successor to Philip J. McCook.

Photo Paul Thompson.

Tryon Hall, formerly the C. K. G. Billings house, on the highest point on Manhattan Island, bought by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for a city park and now to be used as the nucleus for one of the largest army hospitals in the United States.

Copyright Western Newspaper Union.

Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon, whose criticism of military affairs stirred such a storm in Washington.

Photo Underwood & Underwood.

First ambulance train for the American army in Europe built in Great Britain.

There are nine ward cars on the train, each with an interior like the above. They are open throughout and contain thirty-six folding cots each, so arranged that the cots can be folded down to form backs for "sitting" cases on the lower tier. This is the last word in the construction of such trains.

The sick officers' day saloon is thoroughly comfortable and almost luxurious. The train includes also kitchen, mess, pharmacy, store and infectious ward cars. The complete train consists of sixteen cars with accommodation for about 130 persons. The color is khaki without relief except two large red crosses on white ground on either side.